

Master of Science in Public Health

Examination language

Regarding the choice of language at written and/or oral examinations in the Master of Science in Public Health programme, the Academic Study Board has decided that students can choose freely between the use of Danish (or other Scandinavian languages) and English in individual exams*, including the Master's thesis.

However, in order to ensure that no foreign students are excluded from the possibility to participate in group examinations, the use of English is required in group examinations.

 Please note that in some cases the use of English may be obligatory also at individual exams, if the examiner does not understand Danish.*

Legal basis: Ministerial Order on University Examinations and Grading (the Examination Order) no. 857, 6.-(4): " On programmes offered in English or another foreign language, examinations shall be conducted in the language offered, unless part of the purpose of the examination is to document the students' abilities in another language. The university may grant exemptions from this rule".
