- The topics are quite broad, so it has sometimes been difficult to see the aim.

- Please reconsider pointing people out to speak, it feels a bit downgrading, like schoolchildren.
- the group work during online classes was very confusing, it was expected to do group work 1-3 days before the online classes. which was not possible. It could have been told in advance so we could have coordinated with the group

- Posting of reading etc on a sunday evening and expecting group work to be done beforehand did not work very well
- 1.)think it was problematic that the teacher rescheduled classes with one days notice, the rest of the class was never asked if they agreed or disagreed with moving the lectures.
2.) Many of the readings for the lectures was uploaded VERY late! often sunday-monday when we had lectures tuesday, very disrespectful. Some of the guest teacher also never recommended readings for their lectures, and the recommended reading in the modul book did not say anything about readings for the guest lecture
- It was a bit confusing with the preparations.

- Sometimes readings, groupwork, etc. was put up too late, this should be communicated to the guest lecturers.
- readings uploaded very late almost every time
- It Would be Nice if preparations for the lectures (group work, literature etc) were given more than 1-2 days before the lecture. A week in advance is more realistic, especially for group work.

- English language level of some teachers were not satisfactory.
Student presentation during online class is difficult with bad internet connection.
Discussions during Online Class are hard to execute.
Requirements for student presentation were not totally clear.

- Many lectures have overlapped, with the same information. It's a very broad field with 1mio. topics. So it's a bit hard to study for the exam. Despena is clearly very good at her work, however I feel there have been some culture clashes(from both sides), her way of teaching didn't always fit us as adults at university. Nice with online lectures, online groupwork sadly didn't work.
- The topics were very interesting! unfortunately there were in general lack of structure, lack of recommendations of readings. Also the teaching was unpleseant, where the teacher points out a student to say something eventhough the studen has not raised his/her hand. is a strange way of demanding people to be active in class, in the end it makes the students unsecure and do not want to come to class, because people get nervous to be picked out. It creates a negativ atmosphere in the class.
- There has been a lot of overlaps in the content between this course and several others. Many of the topics were already presented in the global health course. Policy triangle was presented in 1. semester etc. It would have been nice to gain a bit more new knowledge. A suggestion would be talking to the other module coordinators especially from global health specialisation to get an overview of this. Very nice with a good variety of professors and guest lectures though.
